We have to go inside

First, they travel to a forbidden cursed island. When they arrive, the sky is always covered by a glowing blood-red moon. There is no daytime, and dark red rain falls without stopping. In the distance, they see a huge black-and-red building.

"We have to go inside," one of them whispers.

Taking a deep breath, they slowly walk toward the creepy building, wondering what horrors are waiting for them inside.

To open the building, they must find a special key hidden deep beneath the dark ocean. They have only five minutes to find it before the entrance seals forever.

"We have to hurry!" one of them shouts.

He's right. The core is down here.
Almost there.

The Crimson Key is hidden deep beneath the dark ocean surrounding the island.

Without wasting a second, they dive into the cold water.

Strange shadows swim around them, but they keep searching.

"There!" one of them shouts, pointing at a glowing chest resting on the ocean floor.

The chest is protected by a magical security system. Working together, they quickly unlock it and grab the Crimson Key.

With only a few seconds left, they race back to the building.

The giant door slowly creaks open.

"It worked!" they cheer.

But as they step inside, the door slams shut behind them.

The hallway is silent, except for a mysterious voice echoing through the darkness.

"Welcome... to the first trial."
